Light Pollution

Living as we do surrounded by open farmland and woods we are all more than usually appreciative of our natural environment.

Perhaps we should give more thought to the adverse effect of artificial lighting.

Across the world artificial lighting has risen significantly, and there is increasing evidence that this has a bad effect on a wide range of insects, birds, nocturnal animals, and perhaps even plants.

The simple measure of turning off outside lighting, or having lights on a timer or motion sensor, would have a positive impact on our environment.
